

KING OF ALL THE THIEVES

Remarkable Career of "Dr." Detwiller, Who Throve by Robbing His Wealthy Patients.

CRIMINAL FROM BIRTH

Not Only a Lifelong Sneakthief Never But Once Jailed, But Shone as a Don Juan—Probably Guilty of Many Murders by Poison.

New York, Oct. 10.—When the people of South Bethlehem were told that Dr. Detwiller, who had not molested them nor their chattels for some months, had died at Newport from the effects of an operation for appendicitis, they showed their heads in sceptical fashion. They didn't believe it. They said to one another: "It is more likely that he died as a burglar ought—by the bullet from the revolver of an outraged householder."

And this is why they arrived at the conclusion so speedily. John Detwiller was a boy in South Bethlehem, was a terror and a scandal to the town. His evil inclinations would yield neither to advice, threats nor punishment. And because it was remembered that his grandfather had exhibited the same propensities in his youth which his discipline had eradicated, he was treated as a degenerate, as a hopeless case, and was protected from the law where another would have found no sympathy.

He was born on February 28, 1832, at Heliottown, a station on the Reading Railroad, four miles south of South Bethlehem. Almost as soon as he was able to walk he was exhibiting the special early vice of constitutionally bad boys—he was a runaway boy. By absconding himself from home he kept his parents in a constant worry. He seemed unable to tell the truth, and he would steal whatever he could lay his hands on. Even as an orphan his deceptions were on a wholesale scale, unequalled in all the annals of boys. He was shunned by his school mates; his school master feared him.

This boy who was so bad he would not stay at home, and who could not be kept at school for the same reason, was finally deemed by his parents material out of which a doctor might be made. So a young ruffian, whom everyone loathed and feared, was sent to his uncle, John Detwiller, at Easton, to learn the gentle art of healing.

Perhaps his cunning mind foresaw the advantages the honorable profession of medicine would offer to a boy of every impulse was criminal. At any rate, he made such progress with his uncle that he was in due time enabled to enter the University of Pennsylvania. As a student of that institution he found his immediate opportunities for crime superior to what the college seemed to offer in the same line. The future was furnished with apparatus some of it valuable. Whatever young Detwiller said that he wanted, he took, whether it was in the shape of costly instruments or watches and clothing belonging to the students. At first his fellow students were charitable, even sympathetic. They believed him to be a kleptomaniac. Instead of handing him over to the authorities, they wrote to his parents, and time and again the old people, though brokenhearted, indemnified his victims. In fact they continued to do so while he lived.

While studying in Philadelphia, Detwiller robbed the Academy of Natural Science of its most valuable contents. It was his habit to take refuge when danger of discovery threatened inside a stuffed mouse. One night he emerged too soon from his hiding place, and after a fight was captured. This time he was obliged to work several weeks in a Pennsylvania Prison before his relatives—out of whom was Major Fox—could bring to bear sufficient influence to secure his release.

From prison "Dr." Detwiller, as he now styled himself, returned to Bethlehem and hung out his professional shingle. Patients went to him, and some of them were robbed of their watches in his office, and when the doctor called at an patient's house he levied tribute on valuables without reach to an extent that rendered his fee insignificant by comparison. He started a systematic scheme of robberies in the homes of the wealthy to which he was summoned, and was so clever that no specific case of burglary could be made out against him.

Next his criminal enterprise turned to the pillaging of the graves of Indians buried in the old Moravian cemetery. In this gruesome undertaking he was speedily detected, but as he had taken care to become a member of the congregation of the Moravian Church, the matter was hushed up. But the president of the church enforced the rule of locking the cemetery gates at 7 o'clock just the same.

Shortly afterwards there was a fire in the town. It was whispered about that Dr. Detwiller had threatened to burn out the unfortunate tenant. Discovering that he was suspected the doctor disappeared. The simultaneous disappearance of a young woman named Koch was the beginning of his evil reputation as a betrayer of virtue.

Before long he returned without the young woman. The news followed him from Philadelphia, where he took her that he did not get along well together. So he betrayed the daughter of a wealthy German professor and came to New York. Here some unlawful act made it desirable that he should get away secretly. Going over to New Jersey he stole a yacht and was sailing out of the harbor when captured.

As usual he escaped punishment through the intervention of friends. But this neighborhood did not encourage his continued presence, and he went to sea. He was in Brazil when next heard from, and the news pictured him as a Don Juan of the most distinguished attainments.

He was believed in Bethlehem most of the stories that came from Brazil. In the light of the past Dr. Detwiller they had no reason not to believe them. He won the heart of a rich planter's daughter, fought a duel with her discarded lover, married her, secured her right of real estate in his own name, took her jewels and returned home to boast of gifts made to him by the Government.

After his return his two children died, many said suspiciously. It was his habit to disappear suddenly, sometimes only for a day and sometimes for weeks. He always returned under cover of darkness, if he said, with foot, which he secreted about his premises until such time as he could dispose of it.

All this time his conquests of women continued. He carried with him a list of the names of these women. Once he exhibited the names of over four hundred women, married and single, whose reputations he had ruined.

Upon this list of names was a Mrs. White, who seemed to have been the first to possess great influence over him. She captivated him completely. Her sway over him increased steadily, and three years ago they disappeared from Bethlehem together.

A few weeks before they left town her only child died. According to report this child was well at noon and dead before midnight.

When Dr. Detwiller established himself at Newport with a handsome woman whom he introduced as his wife he brought with him fine furniture and ample funds, yet took an unpunctuated cottage on an obscure street near the north end of the city. He soon secured a practice, including several of the cottagers of the more aristocratic South Side. Among his patients were the Fitz-Hugh Whitehouses.

He claimed to have patients out of town. In this way he accounted for periodical disappearances that otherwise would have been mysterious. At such times it would be given out that he had gone to Tiverton, or Warren, or Bristol, or Fall River. His reputation in Newport was good up to the time of his death. Nobody suspected the dual character of the man.

Suddenly he was stricken with a mysterious disease, and a few days later there was another handsome woman in his cottage—a stranger in Newport. After his death it was found that he had left all the money he possessed to Margaret Swigart, of No. 103 Third avenue, Bethlehem, Pa. With the bequest was a message telling where he had hidden valuable apparatus beneath his stairs and a diagram accompanying it. The apparatus was valued at $12,000 and was to be sold in Philadelphia.

This paper is now in the hands of the Newport police. The believed it referred to an apparatus belonging to Professor Walcott Gibbs, of Harvard College, which was stolen last March—a month after Dr. Detwiller's arrival in Newport; but a thorough search as directed by the diagram revealed nothing.

The only property left by Dr. Detwiller in Newport is $100 a local bank and a large collection of stuffed birds and animals. The police believed that he received $100 for platinum stolen from Professor Gibbs. His will which mentions four building lots in Jersey City, will be contested by Mrs. Detwiller No. 1, who yesterday announced former Judge Darius Baker to conduct her case.

The police are still confident of their ability to connect Dr. Detwiller with other robberies than that of Dr. Gibbs' laboratory, and possibly in Newport.

CASE UNDER ADVISEMENT
Jocelyn Case Was Argued Before Judge Simpson.

City Attorney George Adams and Mr. I. N. Haymaker went to Newton yesterday to argue the case wherein the Rock Island Lumber company garnished funds deposited in the Fourth National bank by Colonel Jocelyn, as president of the board of metropolitan police commissioners. The case was brought before Judge Simpson on a charge of venue. The amount involved is $20. After hearing the arguments, Judge Simpson took the matter under advisement. He will probably hand down his decision this week. Mr. Adams represented the city and Mr. Haymaker the bank.

FIRE SUNDAY MORNING
Department Called to an Empty House on Water Street.

The fire department was called out by telephone Sunday morning about 5 o'clock to an empty house at 221 North Water street. It was recently occupied by Mrs. Van Valkenburg, whose husband is in jail charged with stealing chickens. She also was before Judge Mitchell for disturbing the peace. When the department arrived

MAY BE FOUL PLAY

Jury at Kansas City so Decides on A. C. Sowers' Death.

The coroner's jury at Kansas City Saturday afternoon failed to agree as to the death of Charles A. Sowers, who it was reported, was killed by a Pittsburg and Gulf train. The jury were under the impression that foul play had more to do with his death than did the train. Charles Sowers, as he was called by his friends here, was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sowers of this city.

BRIDGE IS COMPLETED

Repairing of the Seventeenth Street Bridge Finished.

Today the Seventeenth street bridge will be opened to the public. All the work of repairing has been completed and the bridge now presents the appearance of a new bridge. The expense to the city will be between $400 and $500. There is an island just north of the bridge in Little river. It was found necessary to cut off the extreme point. The bank on the east side of the stream has been giving way, and this was placed along the bank for a distance of about 125 feet. Brush, dirt and filling was thrown into the space from the bank to the river. All of the dirt and brush was cut from the island.

The Unitarian Women's society will meet with Mrs. Butler, 1341 Wichita street, Wednesday, October 12, at 2:30 p. m. Response and sewing work are in order. A full attendance is urged as important business must be decided. Mrs. Burrill, secretary.

Copper Colored Spots.
Mr. H. L. Myers, 100 Mulberry Street, Newark, N. J., says: "I contracted a terrible blood disease which broke out into sores all over my body. I spent a hundred dollars with doctors but grew worse instead of better. Many blood remedies were also used with no effect, until I decided to try S.S.S. This remedy seemed to get at the seat of the disease and cured me completely and permanently."

(Swift's Specific) is the only cure for Contagious Blood Poison; no other remedy can reach this terrible disease. Send for self-treatment mailed free by Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Ga.

O'CONNOR IS OUT

Pardoned by Gov. Leedy on Last Saturday.

LONG LIST OF PETITIONS

Due to Reported Statement of W. E. Stanley.

Barney O'Connor, the most famous, persistent and one of the best natured jointists in Kansas, has been pardoned by Governor Leedy and was out on the streets yesterday. The papers for his release arrived Sunday. Barney's sentence in the particular case in question, which sentence has been commuted by Governor Leedy, was a five months' stay in jail. That was for the Sedgewick county offense of Mr. O'Connor at Cheney. He was in jail at Wellington before coming here.

It has been two years or more now since Mr. O'Connor, by contract with a Wichita lawyer, decided to cheat and sell "barbed wire" by the wheel, the blind tiger, the back door and the usual Kansas country town methods. Cheney didn't want him evidently, for he was chased from one building to another, from one place to another, till he finally staked up in a tent just outside the corporate limits of the burg. Barney was not running a circus though he was under canvas on the common near the town, but the proceedings incident upon his stay in the place beat any circus that ever came west.

He finally decided to quit the place, under advice from the county attorney. He came to Wichita on a Saturday of the month of July in '97, to make arrangements to get out of Cheney. On the following Monday, when he returned, he found his place burned, his goods destroyed and himself indicted under the Hobbs law of Kansas. He went away and loomed up in Wellington next.

He met practically the same results, though not by such severe measures. He was finally arrested by officers in both counties. He gave bond and went away. He was in some remote part of Oklahoma for months. He was wanted in Wellington and in Wichita, but he couldn't be found.

Finally one day he was caught just across in Kansas, in Kansas City. He had already been tried and convicted, so he began the service of his sentence. He was put in here in August.

There were new applications for pardons presented to the state board of pardons at its session just closed, and among them Barney O'Connor's. There seems to have been an unusual rush, and the board lays it to the fact, says a Topeka paper, that Stanley intimated that he would do away with the board and have a new one elected, and every convict is anxious to get his application in and acted upon before any change takes place.

"The applications have come in faster at this session than we could look them over," said Mayo Thomas, "and we will have to leave the rest of them until our January meeting. Every convict who could get up a petition to free him rushed it through in order to get it in before the board is abolished. Provided Stanley is elected and carries out his resolves to abolish the board, we could not begin to look at near all the applications."

The October meeting of the board was unusually short. It began on September 28, five days ahead of time, and adjourned Saturday evening, having been in session only twelve days, whereas the sessions usually last a month. The cause of the unusual rush was that some of the members had courts to attend and all wanted to get into the campaign.

The Cost of Freeing Cuba.
The United States are certainly entitled to retain possession of the Philippine islands if the peace commissioners so decide, for the cost of the war runs into the millions, and the end is not yet. The money paid out reaches an astonishing total. To free the stomach, liver, bowels and blood of disease, however, is not an expensive undertaking. A few dollars invested in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will accomplish the task easily. The user as well as the rich can afford it.

HER BICYCLE DEMOLISHED
Miss Figg Narrowly Escapes a Bad Accident.

Last evening about 5:30, just north of First street, on Main, Miss Figg, who was on a bicycle, came very nearly being seriously injured. She was riding on the wrong side of the street just as Messrs. Brittenfield and King came down street, driving a very spirited animal. Fortunately they were walking the horse at the time, Miss Figg ran her wheel into the horse. The wheel went between his fore legs and when the handle bars hit his breast he reared up and came down on the bicycle, nearly demolishing it. Miss Figg had fallen off in the meantime, which was all that saved her. It was owing to the excellent horsemanship of Mr. Brittenfield, who was driving, that an awful accident was averted.

There is an ordinance against riding or driving on the wrong side of the street, but recently it has not been enforced up to the letter.

BRISTOW'S OPINION OF QUAYLE
Regards Him as a Brilliant Orator.

The Hon. J. L. Bristow, fourth assistant postmaster general, was in the city Saturday with Charles E. Quinn, with whom he is on the tour of the American West. Mr. Bristow, who is in the Autumn Festival, October 12:

"I have known Dr. Quayle for fifteen years; knew him in college, and have watched him since he graduated. I regard Dr. Quayle as one of the most brilliant platform orators in America. He is a native son of this country, and as a word painter I have never heard his equal."

Dr. Quayle will be at the Epworth Autumn Festival.

AFTER ODD FELLOWS HOME

Messrs. W. A. Ayer, A. E. Helm, C. G. Lusk and Donahoe left last night for Topeka to attend the grand lodge of the I. O. O. F. These gentlemen comprise the committee which will do all in their power to have the Orphans' home for the children of all Odd Fellows in the state located in this city. It will probably not be decided until next Thursday night.

POSTING PROCLAMATIONS
Deputy Sheriff Simmons Has a Week's Work Before Him.

Deputy Sheriff D. C. Simmons started off yesterday afternoon to make every township in the county. He has to post in a conspicuous place the election proclamation fifteen days before election. He will be kept busy for about a week.

THE WEATHER
Wichita, Kan., Oct. 6.
Local forecast for Wichita and vicinity: Until Wednesday fair.

During the past 24 hours the highest temperature has been 74, the lowest 54, and the mean 65, with a thunderstorm during the night (continued from yesterday partly cloudy, cooler weather, gentle southwest wind, with rain and snow, followed by rising barometer.

On this date last year the corresponding temperatures were 51, 54 and 59; and two years ago were 51, 64 and 65.

Thus far this month the average temperature has been 74, or about nine degrees below the normal.

For the past ten years the average temperature for the month of October has been 61, and for the 10th day 61.

A New Hampshire man suffered from indigestion and liver trouble for three years. Ripans Tabules had been recommended by the physician of a friend of his for similar troubles, and he decided to try them. "I first bought a 50-cent box," he writes, "and to my great joy I found they helped me. Now I would not be without them, and shall always speak in the highest terms of them."
